ABOUT MODEL AND POSTER COMPETITION

Human anatomy physiology is the most important aspect of the pharmacy. Introduce drugs into the body that will return the body into its physiological state from the pathological state. Therefore, a good knowledge of physiological parameters will justify the efforts of the drugs formulated dispensed by the pharmacy. The model presentation competition helps to strengthen the capabilities of students to face the challenges in the research and understanding of a topic.

Nanomedicines are increasingly being studied by scientists for different medicinal applications. These include more efficient drug delivery and targeting as well as personalised nanomedicine where a drug is administered to a patient based on their genetic profile.

The key benefit of the poster presentation on nanomedicines will help the students to share their views in terms of research and analysis to a large number of individuals in a simple and concise manner.
